SHORTIA GALACIFOLIA, (cover design) is the local mystery plant. In 1789 Andre Micheaux spent some time in our region and returned to France with specimens of it. He wrote that he had found it on the "high mountains of Carolina" and described it as having the "habit of pyrola and the foliage of galyx."

It would have been considered a myth for the following hundred years except for the specimens preserved. In 1886 Prof. C. S. Sargent did find it — in our Sapphire Country.

To quote Dr. Sondly, "There is no other plant on the American continents, in Europe, Africa, Australia, or in the South Seas, which belongs to the genus of Shortia Galacifolia, or to any related genus. Imperative in its demands, seclusive in its habits, fastidious in its substance, choice in its surroundings, restrictive in its activities, it has chosen for its nativity and residence a single spot on earth. It is, as it has ever been, the "Mystery Flower of the Carolina Mountains." It is listed on page 16.
